Vinification:	after careful sorting, the grapes are destemmed, crushed and left to ferment for about ten days in small steel tanks at a controlled temperature. Once fermentation is complete, the wine is decanted and left to rest until malolactic conversion is completed. It is then decanted once more and left to rest in the tank until bottling. During each stage of processing the wine is protected from contact with the air and no sulphites or other antioxidants are added.
Taste:	it is a wine where the fresh, fruity aspect of the grapes prevails, with good body and pleasant persistence. The nose has hints of blackberry, cherry and red berries.
Pairings:	It goes with pasta dishes with red sauces and meat sauce, red meat, spicy dishes, eggs.
